Job Summary

The incumbent will be responsible for the seventh-grade homeroom as well as teaching Science and Religion for middle-school students (6th–8th grade). The Science curriculum should be well-grounded in classroom management and in elementary school procedures and practices. The Science curriculum consists of a mix of earth, life and physical sciences through a three-dimensional approach: disciplinary core ideas, science/engineering practices, and interrelated concepts. The Jesuit curriculum, Finding God, is used in the Religion class. Religion responsibilities include preparing students for the weekly Friday morning Mass. Gesu is a Catholic school and believes in instilling principles of Christianity in its students; thus, the teacher is expected to understand and to teach principles of religion and faith-based values. The incumbent is expected to communicate with all stakeholders (students, parents, staff, etc.) consistently and effectively in order to build a solid learning environment. This includes providing academic feedback in the form of progress reports, report cards, phone calls and conferences for all students. The teacher is expected to play a key role in preparing students for high school and beyond. The teacher will report to work on school days at 7:20 am, and will, as necessary, be expected to attend to various after-school responsibilities including meetings, tutoring, extracurriculars, etc. The incumbent will work based on an August 15th to June 15th contract.
